Wendy Bailey crowned Miss Lemon Grove 1990

by Lisa Parsons

A new Miss Lemon Grove was crowned Saturday night at Lemon Grove Middle School.

Wendy Bailey, an 18-year-old freshman at Grossmont College, competed with 10 other girls for the title: Amara Early, Margaret Faulkner, Cathy Gardner, Julia Grato, Keri Ann Howard, Kristianne Yarbrough, Tami McIntyre, Carolyn Miller and Tami Woodard. The first runner-up was Kristianne Yarbrough, 19, also a freshman at Grossmont and the second runner up was Amara Early, 17, a senior at Mt Miguel High School. The winner of the essay contest was Cathy Gardner, age 20.

Bailey, a Mt. Miguel graduate, said she had been planning to compete for Miss Lemon Grove her "whole life." Her father, Dale Bailey, is a minister at the Crest Community Church in El Cajon and had been the master of ceremonies for the Miss Lemon Grove pageant since 1972. He gave up his position to Mark O'Rourke this year so his daughter could compete and Wendy said she grew up watching her dad emcee the pageant.

She said she plans to transfer to a four year college after finishing up some general education requirements at Grossmont. "I'd like to go to UCLA or maybe Westmont," she said. Her other goals include becoming a professional vocalist specializing in Christian contemporary music. She plays the violin, as well, and has been active in the Christian Community Theater and Youth for Christ.

During the interview portion of the pageant Bailey was asked who her role model was. "My number one role model is my Heavenly Father," answered Bailey, "and my number two role model is my father here on earth. It is his caring and understanding that help keep my shoulders and head high."

The theme of the pageant was "When You Wish Upon a Star," chosen by Miss Lemon Grove 1989, Becki Battleson. She said when she was little she used to play "Miss America" and that was when she first made a wish for a real crown. She tearfully thanked the people of Lemon Grove for giving her one, "Everything I am today, I owe to the people of Lemon Grove for all their love and support."

Ballesteros calls for change in 79th State Assembly District

by Lisa Parsons

Incumbent Pete Chacon's seat in the State Assembly for the 79th District is being challenged by a woman who sees a need for change.

Celia Ballesteros, an attorney, who has lived in San Diego nearly all of her life and raised her children in Lemon Grove, said she thinks the 79th District deserves a more active and effective representation than has been provided by Chacon.

"I feel that he has been ineffective, has lost touch with the community, having long ago left this community--he lives in Placerville (Northern California)--the voters in the 79th and the entire county deserve better," said Ballesteros.

She said she plans to work very closely with the communities and address specific issues such as drugs and drug-related crime, health care, cleaning up the bay and quality housing.

"San Diego County has the highest rate of medically uninsured citizens of any county in the state of California. San Diego County is 57 out of 58 on overall per capita receipts from Sacramento. By being short changed on funds, those communities needing healthcare are being the most hard hit," she said.

She further stated that because Chacon is anti-choice, he has been reluctant to fund clinics and as a result, women who choose to have their children and cannot afford private medical care, are not receiving critical prenatal care. "In certain pockets of the 79th Assembly District the infant mortality rate is on par with Third World countries," she said.

Ballesteros said she feels her pro-choice stance is representative of the District. "The issue is choice. Citizens do not want government involved in their private life." She also stated that she admired Lucy Killea's courage in standing up for that principal.

Growth management in the 79th District and San Diego receiving an equitable share of tax dollars from Sacramento are priorities with Ballesteros.

"The bottom line is that a large part of the general malaise effecting San Diego can be attributed to a lack of effective pro-active representation [on the part of Chacon]. He has left us both physically and spiritually," said Ballesteros. "I will be here both physically and spiritually."

Taking the Rap

I do believe that most of the present young people will be totally deaf by the time their brain growth catches up with their body growth. The gigantic sound that they require from their music, radio or tape, is ear boggling. I should buy stock in hearing aid companies now, as that business could be "Blue Chip" in the future.

By adding "reverbs" to a car radio or tape player installed in a convertible, the sound emerging can make the purr of a pussy cat sound like a sonic boom. When one of those monsters of music passes by our house, usually well after bedtime, the effect is very similar to the recent earthquake tremors.

The latest gimmick to get my attention and make me more disgusted with the younger human race is the new so called "Rap Music". To call it music is a disgrace to Mitch Miller or Lawrence Welk. The words or lyrics to this disgusting form of public annoyance are so full of those four letter words it would make an old truck driver blush.

I'm not such a prude that I can't live with it, but those vulgar words are overheard by little ones and that really bugs me. They hear it and think that it's "cool" and should be repeated by them. Our modern society is rotten enough without any help from the "Music Monsters".

The local governments have passed ordinances to outlaw loud so-called music from any source, but it will be hard to enforce. By the time the police arrived, the offenders could be miles away and probably couldn't even hear a siren.

The only solution is to ban the sale of such filthy tapes and control what the radio stations put out on the air. Those rap recordings are just as obscene as some porno video cassettes and should be seen or heard in the privacy of the home.

I have rights and I believe in the rights of others, but something has to be done to prevent broadcasting these horrible obscenities to the unwanting public.

Area Postmaster argues: Despite proposed postage increases, Postal Service remains a bargain!

Before we get too carried away over the proposed postage increases, let's put this discussion into perspective.

The Postal Service remains the best, most affordable and most personal communications system in the land. It also is the nation's largest civilian enterprise---bringing together the talents and energies of nearly 800,000 people working in some 40,000 locations who collect, process and deliver about 535 million pieces of mail a day.

All of those letters and flats and cards and parcels---some 165 billion messages a year---represent about 40 percent of the world's mail. By contrast, Japan---the second-largest carrier of cards and letters---handles about eight percent of the world's volume. By the way, its citizens pay the equivalent of 43 cents to mail a letter anywhere in their country---an area somewhat smaller than New England.

The obvious point here is that the Postal Service has an awesome job and an equally awesome responsibility to serve this nation's needs for efficient and effective mail service. We offer the world's best mail service, but we can do even better.

We can do better by achieving the objectives of our six-year strategic plan. These objectives are:

To increase the level of customer satisfaction with postal services;

To maintain reasonable rates by keeping cumulative inflation in postal costs below inflation in the economy; and

To increase the commitment of our employees by creating a work environment that fosters increased focus on quality service at reasonable rates.

Our goal this year is to operate below inflation. During our first quarter, we met that goal---we were $121 million ahead of budget with a two-percent-plus increase in our productivity. That is our highest increase in productivity in four years. So we are making progress---real progress.

My point is this. We have a plan. It is a workable plan. And, we are winning the battle to control costs.

Without question, these are demanding challenges that will require exceptional response from our employees. We have no choice but to make that exceptional response---just as this nation's postal people have done for more than two centuries. And, we will continue to provide the American people with the world's best and least-expensive postal services.

Sincerely, Margaret Sellers

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges

Season's end, but it's just the start

Happy are he and she who follow college basketball as they anticipate the joys of winning and the pain of defeat during the final five plateaus of the collegiate season.

Basketball is an All-American sport designed as a midwinter athletic activity for middle aged men, but it has grown so popular since that day in 1892 when Dr. James A. Naismith introduced the sport that is now played around the world by men and women of all sizes, shapes and ages.

The game fits the needs of rich and poor, tall and short, young and old, bumbling beginner and polished professional.

But mostly it fits the needs of college and professional promotions folks who measure serious competition with box office attraction. The rhythm of the clicking at the turnstile, the roar of the crowd and the lights of national television coverage.

And that brings us to the final five phases of the college campaign, or, if you prefer, the final half of the season.

Broken down, the 10 phases of annual collegiate hoop campaigns starts with pre-season play, moves on to the match up home and home series to get up a head of steam for the annual Holiday Tournament offings. The first half of the cage campaign ends with actual league play, followed by the league playoffs.

That should end the season, right?

Oh, how wrong can you get.

Shame on you for thinking those promoter fellows would let a hot game grow cold while there are still tickets to be sold.

The kickoff plateau for the final five episodes of the college cage season is making the 64 team NCAA, single elimination, championship tournament.

Now, some of the teams not selected will make noises as if they have been given the golden digit by NCAA selectors. In truth, several non-invited teams have impressively better playing grades than a number of teams earning invitations.

Most such teams represent small schools with marginal gate appeal. Basketball is a sport to the players and the schools, but the tournament is a business to the NCAA.

They'll take a name team with a suspect record and a loyal following over Appleknocker University's 20-4 mark anytime.

Then the money and the goals follow in order. There are big rewards for making the final 16. And even more for the lucky final four teams.

Television covers everything, but the final four get a major league promotion and the championship game is a ratings buster.

We're going to be basketballed out before the final four get to the playing studio.

And just when you think you couldn't stand another tip-off, the National Basketball Association completes it's regular season by eliminating about 10 teams and starts another round of playoffs to find a professional league national champion.

Hockey follows the same path to the Stanley Cup. Hockey and basketball playoff games will be televised and with all that skating and running around and shooting and such, there are reports that some people even bet on the outcome of these contests. What will they think of next?

Letter to the editor

Praise for Deputies

We want to compliment two of the Deputies who work the Lemon Grove area. Deputy P. Weichert and Deputy V. Joslyn. both are very helpful, efficient and courteous young men.

On the night of February 15th we were robbed in our house in Lemon Grove. My wife called the 911 number and the response was most prompt. Within 10 minutes or less.

They very quickly had a suspect in custody and we were able to identify him. Because of the very short time between the robbery and identification, the recognition was immediate and positive.

Deputy Weichert came right back to complete the paper work and, although it was late, he was very thorough and courteous in completing the lengthy details of the crime report.

We feel that the citizens of Lemon Grove are fortunate to have Deputies of this high caliber in law enforcement working out of this substation.

Sincerely, Mr. & Mrs. J. E. Hall

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Joe Versus the Volcano

After I saw this movie there were a few questions I wanted to ask. Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan, why did you take this job? Steven Spielberg, why did you produce it? And John Patrick Shanley, why did you even bother writing the screenplay? "Joe Versus The Volcano" is nothing but trash.

Shanley's basic story idea could have spawned a better movie. Your average boring, spineless, hypochondriac Joe (Tom Hanks), is told by his doctor (Robert Stack) that he has a "Brain cloud," a rare deterioration of brain tissue which eventually leads to the death of the afflicted. He has six months to live. So, Joe tells off his obnoxious boss, quits his job, and starts sulking. He has a bit more guts now, but he's still average and boring.

Suddenly, a millionaire playboy (Lloyd Bridges) is at Joe's doorstep, spouting rhetoric about heroes and destiny. It seems the inhabitants of the small island Wapone Woo are doomed to sink into the sea unless someone willfully sacrifices himself to the islands mighty volcano. Why not Joe? After all, he's only got six months to live, but he may live them as a king if he agrees to appease the fiery god. Obviously, Joe accepts.

Until that point in the story Shanley, (who also serves as director), had a good thing going. His images surrounding Joe's slave-like employment were both fascinating and haunting, a mix between "1984" and Romero's "Night of the Living Dead." The opening sequences qualify as scorching commentary on society's value of productivity over happiness. But as soon as Joe accepts the volcanic challenge, it seems Shanley ran out of intelligent ideas. The film loses balance, mixing adventure with slapstick, rather unsuccessfully. In one scene, Joe begins to build a relationship with the millionaire's beautiful daughter (Meg Ryan) while en route to Wapone Woo. They decide to go fishing off their yacht, but Joe isn't able to catch anything. That is until he pulls in a giant hammerhead shark with a roar like a lion. Sorry guys, that's just too stupid.

From there, it gets worse and worse until the final climactic scene when...well, I guess I won't tell you in case you go see it. But I'm warning you-don't waste your money! The dazzling sets are wasted, and Meg Ryan hardly has anything to do. The only actors worth watching are Bridges and Abe Vigoda as the King of Wapone Woo.

The rest of the film - and I cannot stress this enough - is garbage.

Critic's Rating: D

Drama argues journalistic truth

by Robert Korbett

"Rebel Armies Deep into Chad," a story about responsibility and survival, is written by Mark Lee, former reporter for the London Daily Telegraph. He was expelled from Uganda for writing about army atrocities. His theatrical writing bears the feeling of a journalist who keeps to the bare bones of the story. The script has little excess.

It's the early 80's and sanctuary is a small cottage near Nairobi, Kenya. Neal Bateman (Jim Phipps) is the young journalist who is tired of the daily humdrum writing he is doing and the play's title is his dream article. It is by accident that he captures the story of genocide in Idi Amin's Uganda by front line reporting. Charles Richardson-Dove (Richard Kneeland) is described in the play as "a man without country or tribe." He has situated himself as news channeler for the Reuters network with beer in hand and hookers on call and would rather be "the little man at the edge of the picture;" cool, calm, watching, a journalist not a part of the world.

Dove is desperate for a meaty story, since he blew a previous opportunity. He senses Bateman has his redeeming report.

To get Bateman to open up, Dove uses his beer and women. Christina (Cheryl Francis Harrington) is a refugee from Kampala, the Ugandan capital, seeking safety in Kenya. An educated woman, her survival is in a service-oriented position. Mary (Rose Weaver) has been around the block many times and knows to keep a smile on her face and any sense of smart out of the trade's way.

Bateman is frightened by his newly-realized sense of power of the pen when his story causes deaths. The physical and mental scars of the rebellion are apparent on each character. And the ravages of the natives (mostly the work of the army quelling the rebels) are deep.

Director Adrian Hall, whose previous Globe work was last summer's Measure for Measure, establishes a sense of normalcy; a sense of immediacy in this crisis situation. Yet the tension is pervasive. His characters pace as caged beasts; they are ready to pounce for money or words. Three-fourths of Ken Dorsey's set being topped with barbed wire helps to create the sense of the danger within and without.

The acting is tight and strong. Phipps is a little boy scared and wanting to run for cover. The ladies are impressive. But it is Kneeland who walks off with the golden moments of discovery and torment. His character could have been the usual washed-up, pot-bellied antagonist, but the actor has shaded Dove with layers of personality.

"Rebel Armies Deep into Chad" continues at the Carter Theatre in Balboa Park through April 15, with performances Tuesday through Sunday at 8 p.m. and weekend matinees. For ticket information and reservations, contact the Globe box office at 239-2255.

Lemon Grove Middle School excels at festival

by Carol McCarthy

Have you ever sat before a judge? Do memories of nervous excitement come back to you? The Band & Orchestra students of Lemon Grove Middle School "faced the music" on March 3, 1990 at Helix High School Band & Orchestra Assoc. Solo and Ensemble Festival. Under the direction of Tom Higdon, with assistant Sue Keller, Lemon Grove was well represented.

The anticipation of each soloist and group showed as the day finished with OUTSTANDING results! Nine soloists received the highest possible "Superior" rating and 14 soloists received "Excellent" ratings. The ensembles performing also brought pride to their school with high marks.

It is a performance that all can be proud of in Lemon Grove. It isn't easy to stand before judges and maintain your composure as these students have done. A hearty CONGRATULATIONS goes to all of them for their hard work and fine accomplishments!

Lemon Grove Lutheran Church to present Cal Lutheran Choir

The 68-voice choir of California Lutheran University of Thousand Oaks will present a concert at Lemon Grove Lutheran Church, 2055 Skyline Drive, Lemon Grove, on Sunday, March 25 at 7 p.m.

The concert is part of the choir's annual tour, a tradition that began in their first year--1962. This year the choir will perform in nine cities throughout California and Nevada.

Under the direction of Dr. James Fritschel, professor of music at the university and choir director since September 1984, the choir will be performing spirituals, motet anthems and a variety of lighter music. The concert will feature Aaron Copland's "In the Beginning," written in 1947. Organist Carl Bertram Swanson, professor of music specializing in organ, theory, and church music, will also perform with the choir.

The public is invited to attend this free concert; a freewill offering will be taken.

Come rain or shine, waterhogs are waterhogs. Their sprinkler systems go on even when it's raining cats and dogs. They don't realize how important it is to use water wisely in the winter.

Don't be a winter waterhog.

Winter rain in San Diego doesn't wash away the fact that saving water is a year-round necessity. That's because local rain water contributes little to our daily supply. It's actually the melted snow that feeds the Colorado River and Northern California rivers that we rely on all year for 90% of our water.

There's no reason to go hog wild in winter.

Fact is, most lawns and shrubs are dormant in winter. So heavy watering, whether it's at homes, parks, schools or businesses, is more of a waste than ever. Water less frequently. Shorten the minutes your automatic sprinklers run. And, please, turn them off if rain is in the forecast.

Conservation. Our way of life.

There's a lot we can do to be water tight. To quench your thirst for more information, just give us a call at (619) 297-3218.

DON'T BE A WATERHOG

This winter, we're hoping to teach an old hog new tricks.
